Thank you for your interest in supporting the Harvard College Women’s Center!

Your gift empowers us to meet our commitment to raising awareness of women's and gender issues at Harvard and providing an inviting space for students in which to have these meaningful conversations. Your support of the Women's Center also helps to strengthen and expand the reach of our mentor program linking Harvard undergraduates with graduate students and professionals. Thanks to our generous supporters, we are also able to provide grant funding for women’s and gender-related student groups to host speakers, facilitate workshops, and pursue other initiatives that promote women’s leadership.

Three different gift funds enable our work: the Fund to Support the Harvard College Women’s Center (fund #331400), supports the current-year operations of the Center and may be used to augment educational programs and events, to support the operation of the Center, or for the purchase of publications, supplies, or other needs for fulfillment of the Center’s mission. The second is the Ann Radcliffe Trust (fund #331402) which supports our process of making grant money available to student organizations for projects that raise the visibility of women and women's issues and promote women's leadership on campus. The third, the Women in Science, Technology, Engineering and Math Mentor Program Fund (Fund #331404), directly supports our WiSTEM mentorship program, which was established to build community among women in STEM by matching undergraduates with graduate students in similar fields as well as create programming that fosters the growth and development of women students in the STEM community at Harvard.

If you would like to discuss funding a specific initiative of the Women's Center, please contact Heidi Wickersham, Director, at wickersham@fas.harvard.edu or (617) 496-2029 to explore opportunities for directed gifts and acknowledgment of your support.
